85-1

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity."
These exact words describe my high school years.

It was the best of times because I was growing in many ways from a child to an adult. I learned a lot about myself and my environment, because I was allowed more freedom and began to take on new responsibilities in high school and at home. I had my teachers and parents who offered advice, support and encouragement.

It was the worst of times as well, especially during my senior year in high school, because I was away from my family. My parents decided to send me to Boston for one year before entering college. I had already attended two schools and the thought of having to attend yet another school in another state, devastated me. I had to adjust to a new school again and new environment. The requirements for graduation became more strict during my last year, which made it more difficult for some students already in their last year to graduate.

It was the age of wisdom, a time for making decisions. I was maturing and learning more about myself and the world around me. I was no longer as young and innocent as I once was and I began to face and deal with harsh realities in life. I was given many choices and began to handle things on my own and take responsibilities for my actions. I tried to decide for myself what I wanted to do with my life, what I really wanted for myself.

It was the age of foolishness, a time when a lot of rash decisions were made, not always for the best. It was a time when having a good time was just as important as the competition for grades. We began to rebel against our parents, and bend towards peer pressure. We were at an age when we were indecisive and insecure, and we took everything for granted. We often took everything from granted. We often did things which were harmful to ourselves or to others, things we later regretted, due to the pressures around us, propaganda, and a demanding society.

It was the epoch of belief, when I began to believe in myself, my abilities and I tried to improve myself. I began to think for myself rather than just living up to my parents' high expectations. I was very sensitive but I always tried to be the optimist. If I tried my best and did not do as well as I intended, then I was not too disappointed because I knew I had tried my best. If I did well, I was overcome with a sense of relief and satisfaction.

It was the epoch of incredulity, a time of indecision and another person's word, and if we were deceived, or our belief opposed, we often grew confused, and questioned ourselves and the beliefs that were instilled in us since our youth, or we became skeptical of others. When the pressures were too much for us to handle, we would often make rash judgments and decisions, and evade our responsibilities.

Charles Dickens indirectly states in the quote that there are two sides to everything. You cannot have the good without the bad. I learned a lot about myself during my high school years. It was during those years that I began to mature, learned how to handle responsibility, and deal with my own feelings and with society. Dickens's quote applies not only to how I felt about high school, but about life in general.

Headmaster

TO THE CLASS OF 1985

"Do not despair, that you cannot change
The world in a day or two
Instead, just give your very best
In the little things you do
Then you will find in days to come
When taken all together
These little steps did change and
Make the school a whole lot better!"

-Kimberly Wheeler, Class of '85

Such encouraging words of advice and so apt a description of how you, The Class of 1985, have worked with the staff and administration of Brighton High School to ensure that a quality education was possible for all students.

As you prepare to enter a new stage in your growth, I remind you that nothing is outside the domain of possibility for you. In that light, I encourage you to continue to be change makers. To change the direction of society - a society where nuclear holocaust remains a threat; where ignorance and illiteracy are still existent; where famine and hunger kill; and where greed often supersedes giving. Change is dependent upon you, our Class of 1985.

I am hopeful that your years at Brighton High School provided you not only with knowledge and skills, but with character. That character that made Brighton High School a whole lot better will make the world a whole lot better.

"Fame is a vapor
Popularity an accident
Riches take wings
Only one thing endures
And that is character"

-Horace Greeley

On behalf of the staff and administration of Brighton High School, I wish you much success and happiness.

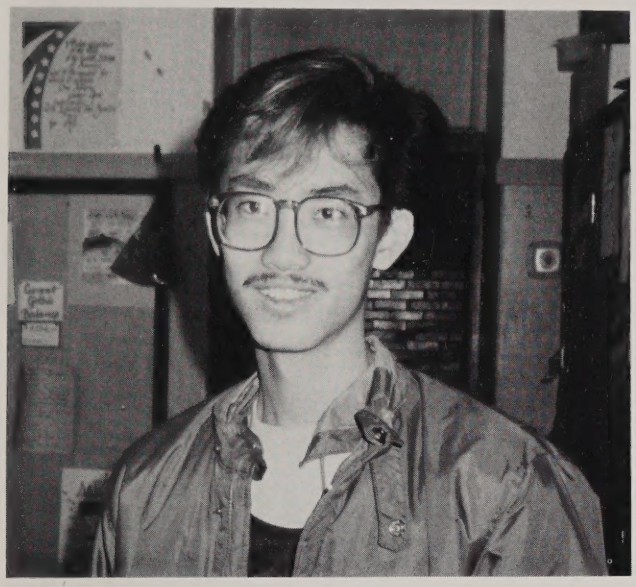
Alfredo in Europe

I can't never forget in my life my trip to L'Alsace, France in which I visited many cities as Strasbourg, Colmar, Haut-Koenigsbourg, Mont-Ste-Odile and many others. Not leaving behind Offenburg in Germany and the city of love known by many of us Paris. I with Cinthya and Sothea from our school were choosen to go with ten more students from the Boston Public Schools. I am very happy that I went because a learn many things about life styles in other parts of the world, meet new peoples, languages, different food and much more.

Alfredo Hernandez

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity."
These exact words describe my high school years.



The best times were meeting new friends and getting to know one another. Meeting people from different backgrounds and cultures was very interesting. We would share experiences with one another and also compare ideas too.

The worst times were having difficulties with certain teachers. Some just didn't quite understand the viewpoint of students. Also there were the times when certain students were too selfish or ignorant to understand each other.

It was the age of wisdom because we were learning through a continuous process and not an overnight sensation. We were so fortunate to have such an opportunity. This is the stage in life where we are learning the most.

It was the age of foolishness because there was always a kid inside us. At certain times that kid inside us took over and we lost our sense of maturity. At times we just couldn't realize the outside world was waiting for us once we left high school.

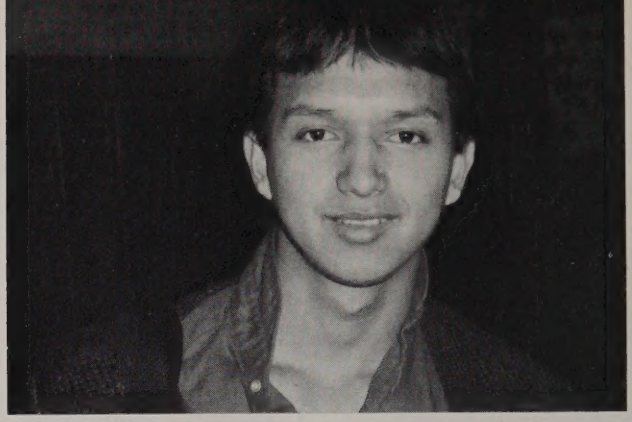
It was the epoch of belief because we were taught friendship among us. This made us more confident about life itself. This also gave us the ambition to go on to other useful things in life such as college instead of just begin a useless individual.

It was the epoch of incredulity because there was always somebody that didn't fit in the crowd. He or she was always the one that liked to start trouble. Also there were people that disturbed everybody. They were always pessimistic about everything and everybody.

These are my thoughts towards my high school years. High school has made a mark in my life and I will never forget it. There were so many memorable moments that it couldn't possibly be put into words, but this really summarizes how I feel.

Andy Chan

Ms. J. Quinn



It was the best of times for many reasons. It was the best of times because I made new friends. It was a time to start on my own and learn new responsibilities. I had to forget thinking about having fun and start thinking about the future. It was the best of times because I met and played with many athletes that were above me and who encouraged me to do my best.

It was the worst of times, because I had to start thinking and making decisions that I had never even thought of. I couldn't go out with my friends after school anymore, because I had too much homework. It was the worst of times because I had to be independent from then on.

It was the age of wisdom, because I learned the answers to questions that I thought had no answers. I learned how to communicate the proper way with others. It was a time that I asked questions that I didn't even know I could ask.

It was the age of foolishness because I went there without knowing anything. I thought I knew about sports but when I went there I found out that I didn't know enough to compete against other athletes. Questions were asked that I had no response to. It showed that I had much to learn.

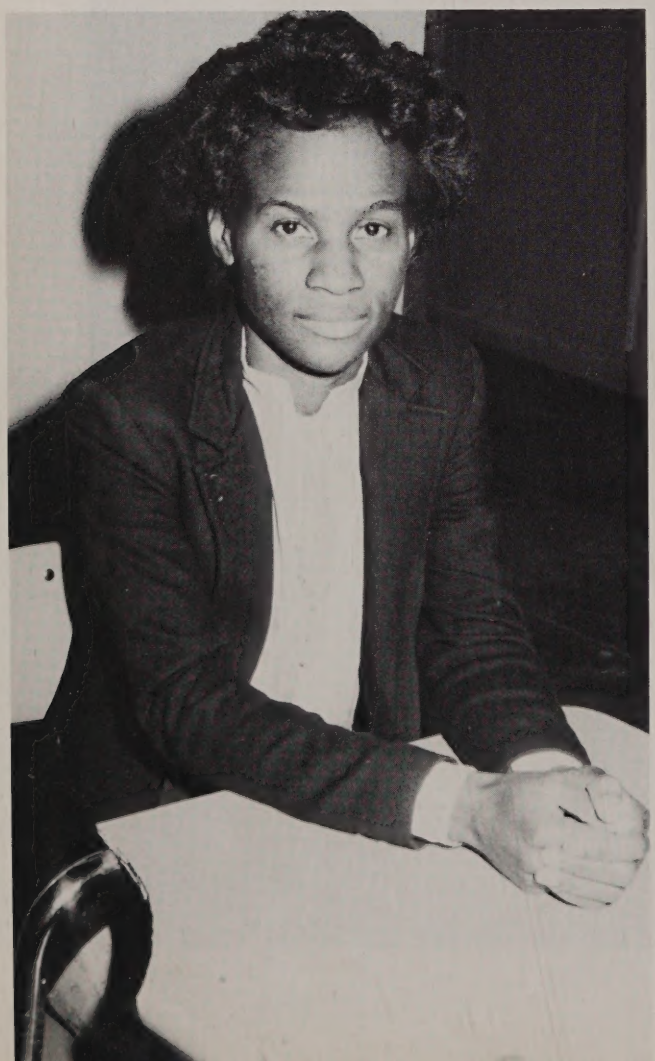
It was the epoch of belief because I gained the belief that I was as bright as others and could go on to college. I also gained the belief that I could play better soccer if I was given the chance to.

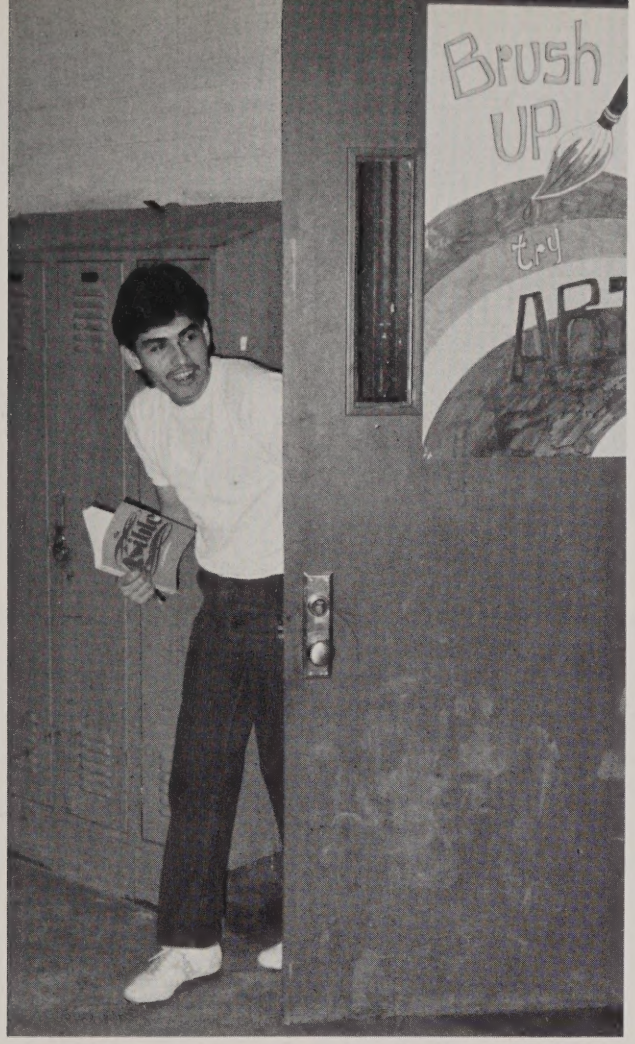
It was the epoch of incredulity because I thought I could never make it through high school. I was skeptical about my own abilities but I was then proven to be wrong.

High school then, was a great period of time for me. It was a learning experience that was sometimes good and sometimes bad. This was what high school was all about.

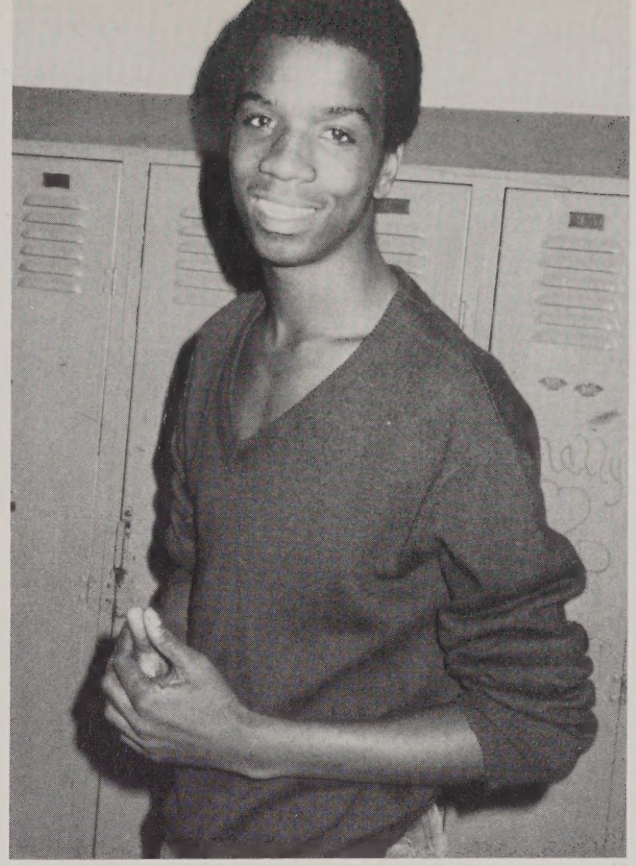
Henry Villavincencio

Ms. Harris

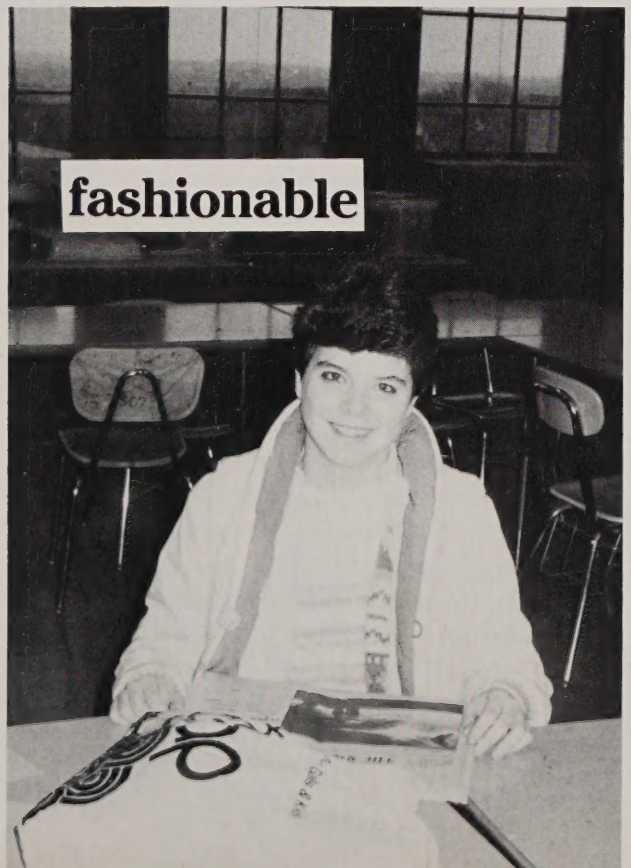


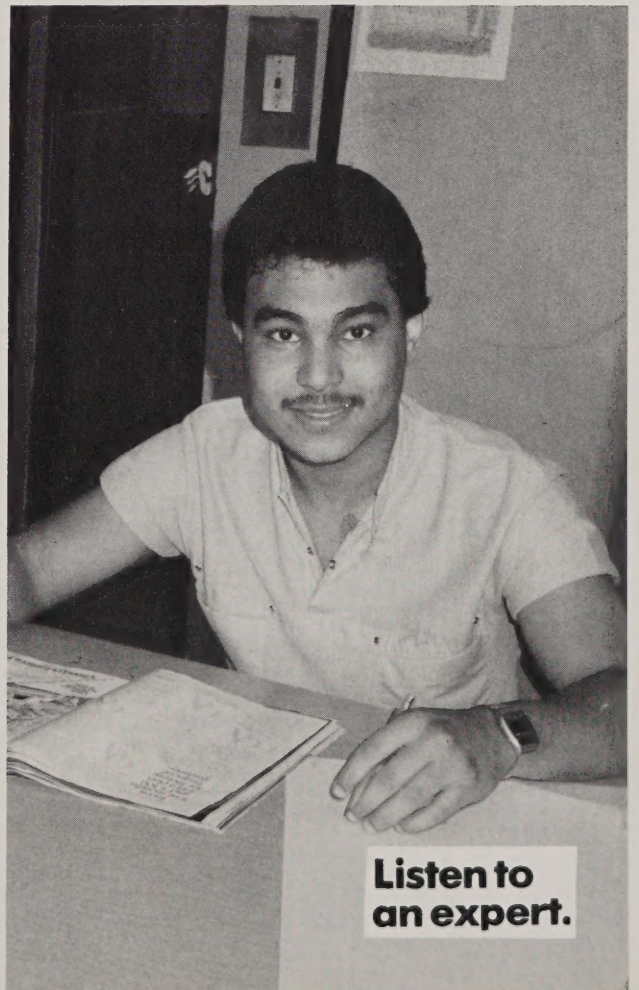


I'm afraid to open the door!"

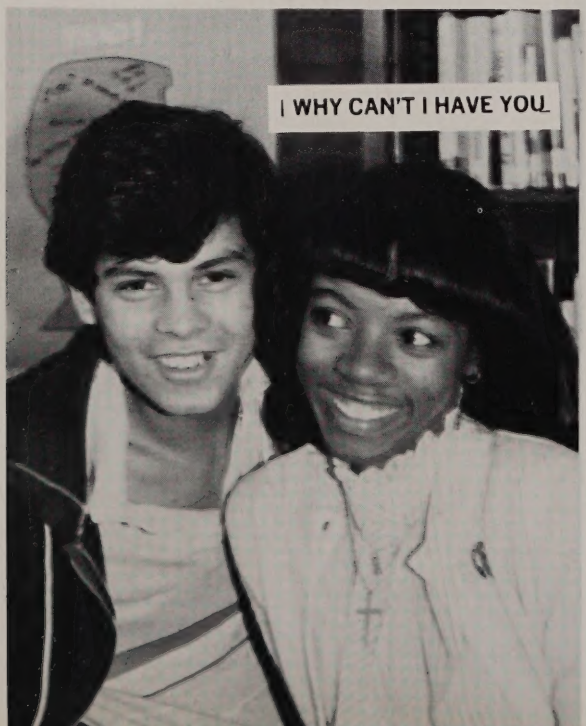


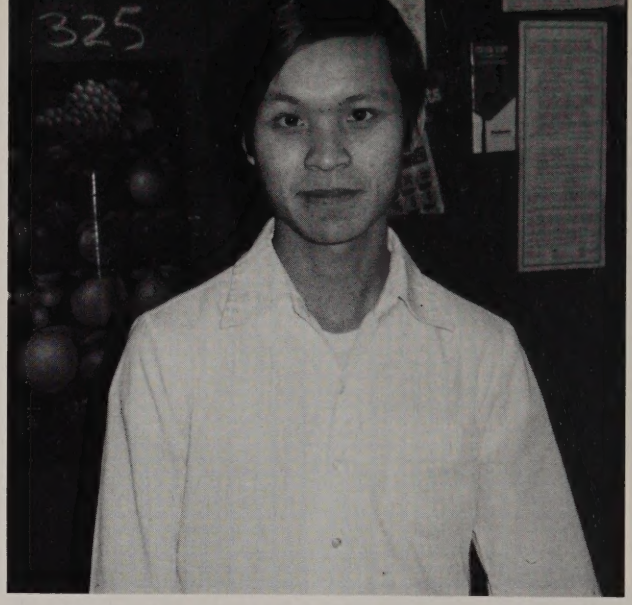
LOOKING GOOD





Furthermore





High school was the best of times. It was a very good time for me to study; I spent all my time in school to learn and get a good education. I had many good friends for sharing, learning and having fun all day.

High school was also the worst of times. It was the time of struggles, struggles with knowledge and with myself. There were many days when I had to spend a whole night to finish my homework, study for tests or prepare for the next day. I also got anxiety when I couldn't pass the tests in class.

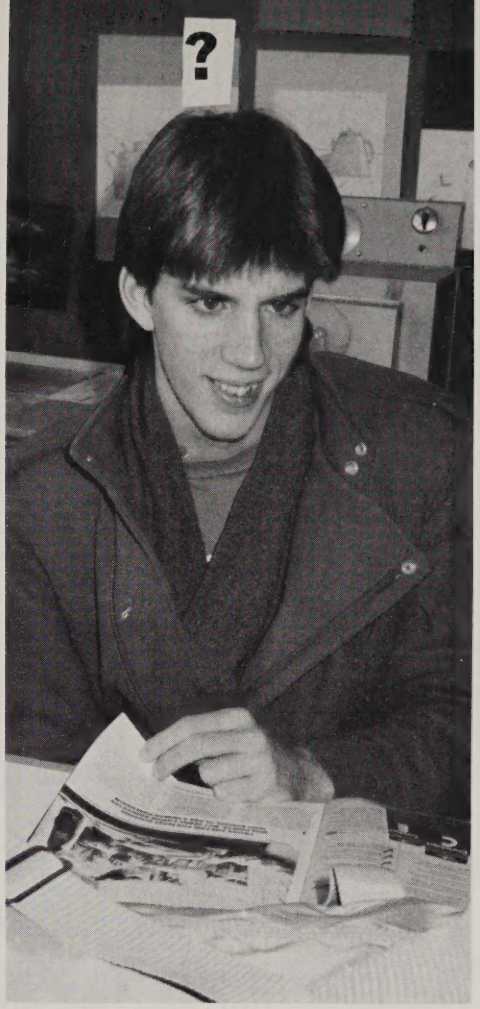
High school was the age of wisdom. Schooling gave me a variety of knowledge. It practiced my mind to become more and more comprehensive. I understood and learned many new things about the world which I never knew in my life.

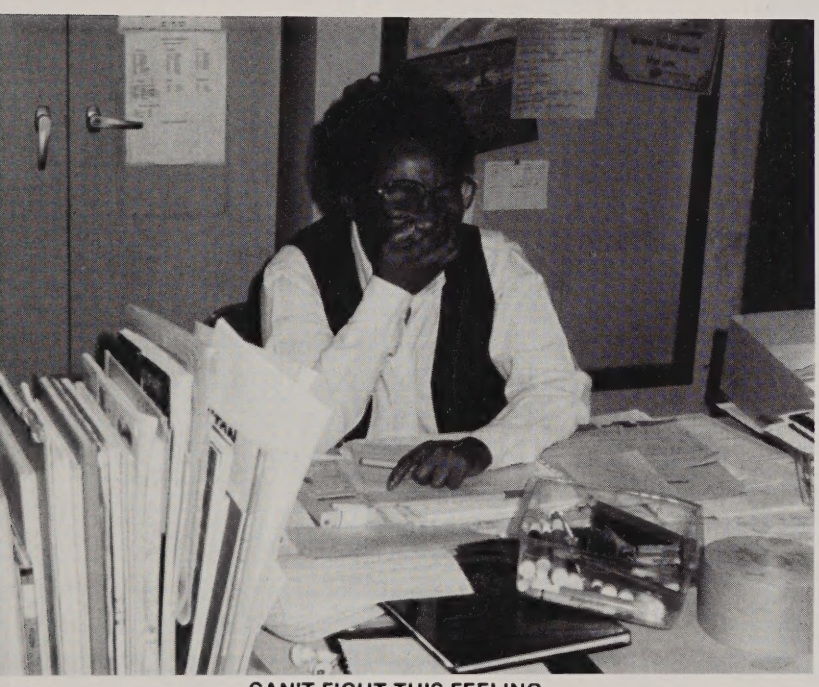
On the other hand, high school was the age of foolishness during high school years. I made many mistakes in education and discipline. It was the time when I did not obey my teachers although what they said was correct. I never admitted my mistakes and was always proud of what I did.

It was the epoch of belief. In school I believed almost everything that teachers taught me. With lacking of knowledge I thought what is printed in books was always accurate. I could even accept extraordinary ideas that opposed my knowledge.

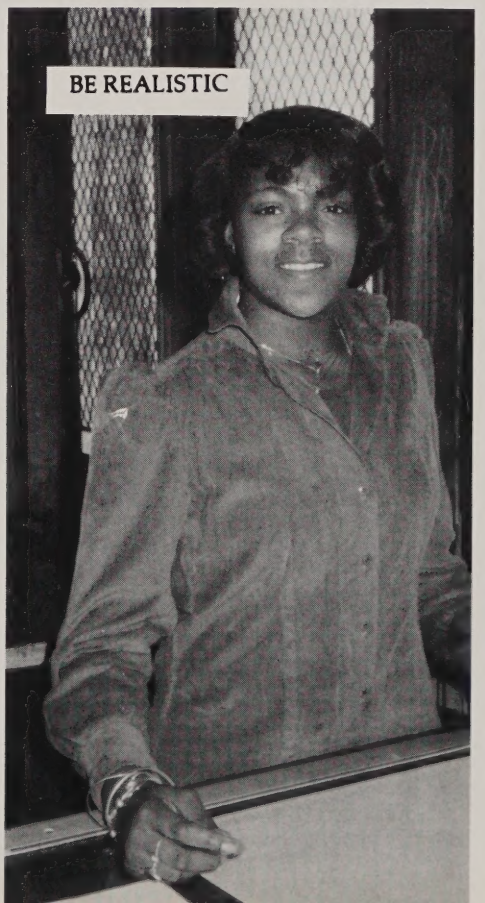
It was the epoch of incredulity. I was very skeptical about my gaining of knowledge. I did not think all the knowledge or skills which I learned were always useful and necessary for survival in this complex society.

Duy Quang Nguyen





CAN'T FIGHT THIS FEELING



Is there anything you can't do?

It was the best of times because, it was a time of my life when I became of age. When I found out who my friends were and weren't. I also met a lot of great teachers who helped me decide what I want to achieve throughout my life. It's also the best of times because I found out who I was.

It was the worst of times, when I got into those petty arguments with girls over boys. It was also the worst of times because it was a time of my life when I had to make a lot of decisions whether they were right or wrong.

It was the age of wisdom when I started to mature and decide on my future, because I known I can't always depend on my mother. It was also the age of wisdom because things I didn't know I learned and know now, and that's something I can take with me for the rest of my life.

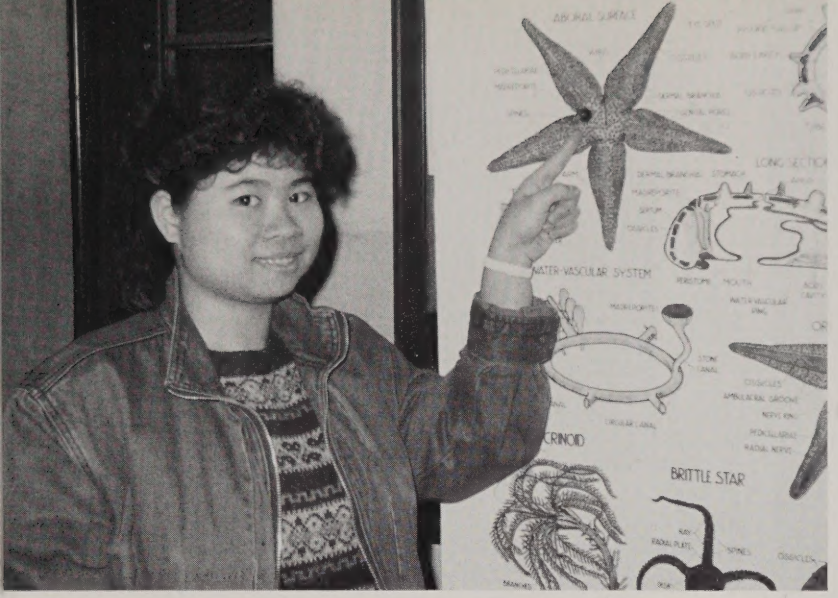
It was the age of foolishness. It was a time in my life where I just wanted to have fun, and hang out with the crowd. It was also the age of foolishness, when you used to throw eggs at the teachers and flatten their tires, just to get in good with the crowd.

It was the epoch of belief. It was a time when I started believing in myself. It's like I never knew who I was until I reached high school. Then things started changing, and I met many people who helped me find out what my purpose was in life.

It was the epoch of incredulity, I never really thought I could get this far because of problems at home. Not always did I believe in myself, but I have a mother who helps me change that attitude.

All in all my high school years were a learning experience that I can treasure for the rest of my life.

By Robin Hayes



Strange Creatures of the Deep

Skeptical Eye

It was the best of times for many reasons. It was the time of getting good grades, having fun with the best and closest friends, going on field trips and having guidance guide me.

It was the worst of times in my high school years. It was the time of failing tests, misunderstanding people and having arguments with others. It was also sometimes lonely and friendless.

It was the age of wisdom when I got a good course and I got what I wished. It was the age of wisdom to be educated in high school, and to learn very good things.

It was the age of foolishness to sleep in school and fool around in study time. It was foolish to be absent too many days from school, and to come to class very late.

It was the epoch of belief in high school. The history events I learned were truth. The English classes developed my reading and writing skills. The mathematics taught me the basic things for calculation, and science class helped me know about the shape of the earth and its atmosphere.

It was the epoch of incredulity in high school years. I was skeptical about the earth being rounded and the discovery of the moon. I also disbelieved how the scientists measured the earth and the speed of light.

In my high school years, I was always having good times with my friends and also having the worst times around. The age of wisdom and foolishness in high school years sometimes happened to me without self-conciousness. There was the epoch of belief when it looked familiar to me and there was the epoch of incredulity when the conclusions were unreasonable.

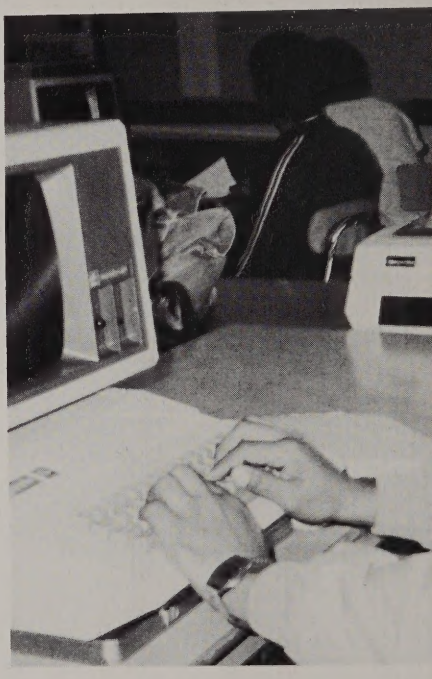
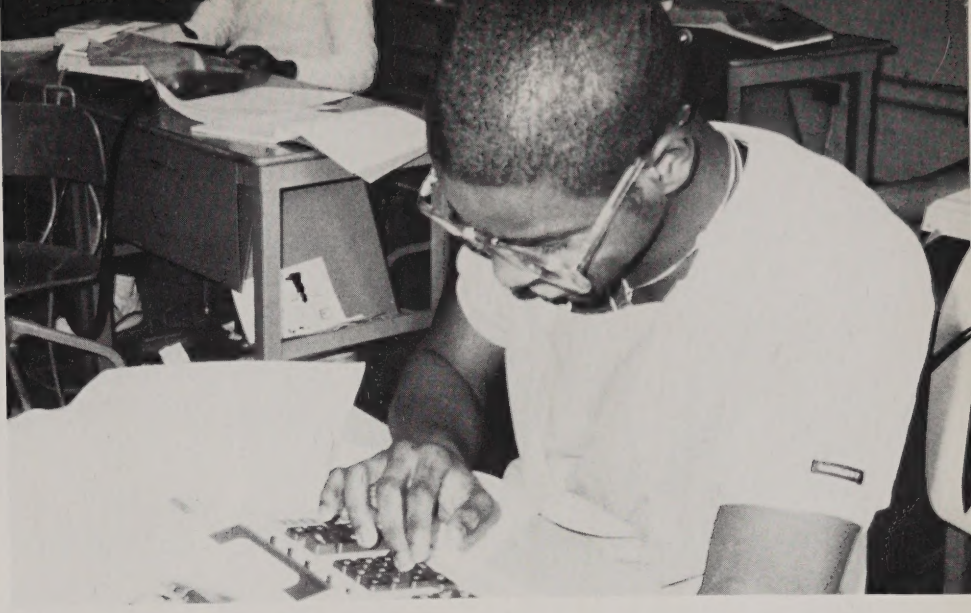
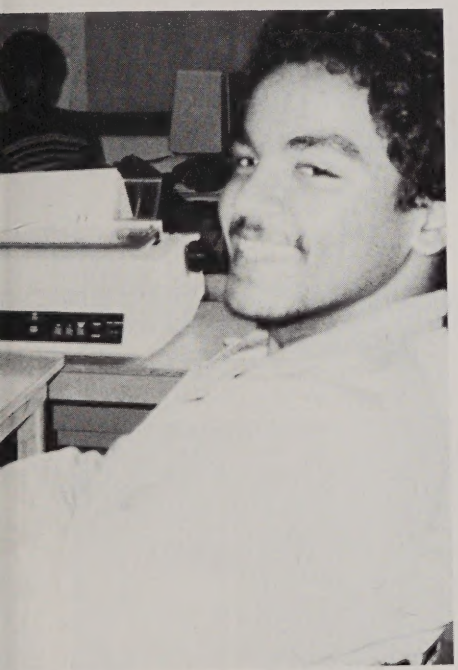
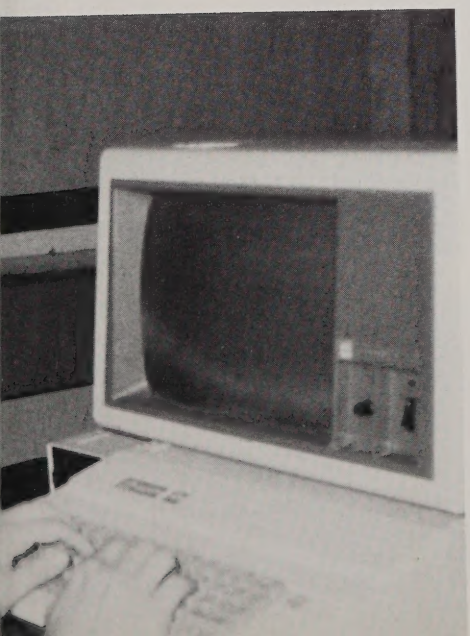
PLUGGING INTO THE FUTURE









Brighton High School INVESTIGATORS AT THE MBL

FOR THE PAST ONE HUNDRED YEARS, the Marine Biological Laboratory in the village of Woods Hole, Massachusetts, has been a place famous for discovery. The founders of the MBL were the first experimental biologists in America, and through the decades the Laboratory has attracted the most productive biologists of the century to work in Woods Hole, including some 40 Nobel laureates. Today the MBL continues to serve as a thoroughfare for investigators from all over the world—an international center for progress in basic biological research.

SCIENCE IS MORE THAN THE accumulation of facts and findings, more than their interpretation, more even than the sudden flash of mind that registers in the public eye as "breakthrough." Science is most of all a grand, collective curiosity, pushed forward not so much by individual genius as by the shared human urge to know more than we already do.

No one in science, of course, ever ceases to be a student—there is simply too much new information and technology to digest and put to use.

TO THE CLASS OF 85

Kiss the years good-bye all the sweetness and the sorrows, now it's time for us to make plans for tomorrow. Yes the years have past, but the memories will last, all the good times will forever stay in our minds. Yes the years are gone now it's time for us to carry on, say good-bye to our friends, but remember our friendship has no end, because we will keep in touch my friend. So kiss the years good-bye to Brighton High, we want to thank you for helping us makw it through. Now we're on our own, we must walk and stand strong. So kiss the years good-bye to Brighton High and we'll try not to cry, because we're no longer boys and girls, it's time for us to face the world. It's time to go to the top and we must never stop. So good-bye thank you, thank you, good-bye thank you thank you, good-bye Brighton High!
